Digital Mental Health

Digital Mental Health (e-mental health) comprises services, programs or apps, delivered via online, mobile or phone based platforms. They may be self-driven or practitioner guided and can be used alone or in combination with face-to-face therapy.

Funded by the Australian Government

The eMHPrac e-Mental Health in Practice Project is funded by the Australian Government and aims to raise health practitioner awareness and knowledge of digital mental health through the provision of free training and support to GP's, Allied Health professionals, service providers working with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, and a range of other practitioners. eMHPrac is led by Queensland University of Technology in partnership with Black Dog Institute, Menzies School of Health Research and University Centre for Rural Health, University of Sydney.

The eMHPrac Resource Guide

The eMHPrac Resource Guide for Practitioners provides a useful overview of various Australian online and teleweb programs. All listed programs have been developed by credible sources, such as the Australian Government, universities, and national non-government organisations.

Each program is described using the following codes:

- R = Requires registration with name/email
- CT = Counsellor/Coach/Therapist assistance included or available
- HP = Separate Health Practitioner access available
- F = Free to access/no cost

This list is current as at March 2020

DISCLAIMER:

The information provided throughout this guide is intended for information purposes only. Whilst many of the services and resources in this guide are government-funded, health practitioners should independently investigate, evaluate and verify the content and credentials of any service or resource before choosing to use it or refer a user to it. The services and resources listed in this guide are not exhaustive and represent primarily Australian products.

Evidence

Australia is an international leader in the development of digital mental health resources and there are now a range of reputable Australian institutions and organisations providing online mental health treatment programs, information, and phone and web-based support.¹

The growth of digital technologies enables those experiencing mental health conditions to have greater access and engagement with psychological treatment.^{2,3} Online delivery has a number of advantages for both clinicians and clients, including anonymity, convenience and cost-effectiveness.⁵

There is now considerable research showing that internet-delivered cognitive behavioural therapy programs are an effective, acceptable and practical form of health care for anxiety, depressive disorders, panic disorder, post-traumatic stress disorder, insomnia, pain management and phobias.^{5,6,7} These programs can be as effective as face-to-face treatment, particularly if there is additional practitioner support.^{6,7} The expansion of online mental health resources has broadened the range of programs available to include a variety of mental health conditions and specific and general populations.

Caution needs to be exercised when utilising health intervention apps. There is substantial interest in health apps due to the large number available, however research shows that the majority lack methodological rigour.^{2,8,9} Limited information is available about apps beyond user reviews and star ratings which can be manipulated.⁸ It is important to assess quality and efficacy of the app and understand who has developed it, and if it is informed by research evidence.⁹ Trusted digital mental health services should be delivered with strong clinical, operational and organisational governance.¹⁰

Head to Health headtohealth.gov.au

Head to Health is a digital mental health gateway launched by the Australian Government in October 2017. It connects Australians to evidence-based and peer-reviewed online resources, either for yourself, for someone else or as a health practitioner.

Services and resources listed on Head to Health are delivered by trusted mental health service providers. They include free or low-cost apps, online support communities, online courses and phone services that are private and secure. Head to Health is helpful when seeking support for a mental health condition, it also provides information about staying mentally well.

Six Ways Head to Health Can Help You

1. Find Australian mental health resources

Australia has great mental health services and resources, but it can be tough finding the ones that suit you best. We've made your search easier by hand-picking resources from publicly funded providers.

2. Discover 4 types of digital resources

Online resources can be convenient, private and effective — and many are completely free! Not only can you find websites with solid information and advice, but you can also use apps and programs to build skills and track progress, share stories in online forums, and get confidential support through phone, email, and chat services.

3. Not sure what you're looking for?

If you don't know where to begin, we've developed a little tool called Sam the Chatbot. Answer some of Sam's questions, and you will be pointed in the right direction.

4. Get immediate support

If you need to talk to someone now, we have a list of phone and webchat contacts you can use to get immediate support.

5. Help yourself help someone else

Supporting someone with a mental health issue can be challenging. We have advice on how to support someone else, as well as links to resources that will help you take care of yourself.

6. See the bigger picture

Head to Health gives you a bird's eye view on the topic of mental health with sections on meaningful life, mental health difficulties, supporting yourself, and supporting someone else.

How can digital mental health resources help your service?

Digital mental health services and programs allow Australians to access mental health information and support from any place, at any time. Digital mental health services are useful tools that can enhance access and availability of mental health support by extending and optimising the work done in session or be used alongside other forms of therapy or support.

Visit our website for updated information about resources, fact sheets, webinars, evidence and upcoming events. This Resource Guide is available as a PDF on our website, and requests for hard copies can also be made via our website order form.

Black Dog Institute offers face-to-face workshops to GPs. They also offer comprehensive range of webinars and online training for GPs and Allied Health practitioners. These resources can be accessed via the eMHPrac website and also the Black Dog Institute website at: <http://www.blackdoginstitute.org.au/education-training/health-professionals/mental-health-in-practice>

Tips for Using Digital Mental Health in Your Practice

When looking to use digital mental health ask yourself:

1. Why are you recommending/referring/using a digital mental health tool with your client? What will they get out of it (benefits)?
2. How will it be utilised? I.e. self guided, therapist supported, between sessions, follow up etc.
3. What are the challenges, barriers or issues of use? You may need to revise which program is being suggested.

Practical issues to consider regarding digital mental health programs

1. Cost
2. Usability and functionality—ease of access and use
3. If it can only be used online
4. What kind of device the program works best on i.e. smartphone, tablet, desktop etc.
5. What operating system (iOS, Android, Windows) does the program need
6. User's technological knowledge and experience
7. Security of the program and the information it collects (i.e. registration)
