Digital Mental Health for the Workplace

HOW CAN DIGITAL MENTAL HEALTH HELP?

We spend a significant portion of our lives at work. According to the Australian Bureau of Statistics, the average employed person in Australia works more than 40 hours per week – that's over half our weekday waking hours. With so much of our time spent at work, and the fact that around 45 per cent of people will experience a mental health condition – typically anxiety or depression – in their lifetime, mental health issues are bound to become intertwined with our work environments. In fact, one in five Australian employees are likely to be experiencing a mental health condition right now.

Research shows that it pays to invest in a mentally healthy workplace. An analysis by PricewaterhouseCoopers showed that every dollar invested results in an average positive return on investment of $2.30, primarily from reductions in presenteeism (reduced productivity at work) and absenteeism, which are estimated to cost the economy $11 billion per year.

A mentally healthy workplace is an environment where employees are supported and feel good about coming to work, and where stress and risk to mental health are well managed. A mentally healthy workplace enhances the resilience and productivity of employees and the organisation.

Fortunately, there are a range of free, publicly available Australian digital mental health resources that can help build a mentally healthy workplace, whether you are:

- An employee wanting to improve your mental health (or assist a colleague)
- An employer or manager wanting to help an individual or group of employees improve their mental wellbeing
- A leader wanting to create a more positive mental health culture at your workplace
- A small business owner wanting mental health help for yourself or your staff

Browse the list of digital mental health resources below for a range of options that provide information, guidance, counselling, and support on managing work-related stress and staying mentally healthy in the workplace.

> ! Digital mental health resources are best suited for people with low-to-moderate symptoms. For more severe or complex mental health issues, it is best to seek help with a qualified professional. Visit your EAP or GP for further advice or a referral.
